EX-PRISONER REACHES HOME

Reported as a prisoner of the Axis forces while participating in African battles with the U. S. Army—home for Christmas nine months later! That is the surprise change in life for a Bridgeport soldier who is unable to give any detail account of his almost unbelievable experiences.

The soldier, Sgt. Ivan T. Simpson, husband of the former Miss Clara M. Hofsa, of 105 W. Seventh St., Bridgeport, is presumed to have "escaped" from the German prison camp, although neither the soldier or his wife would make any statement to that effect.

Simpson was reported missing in action in North Africa since March 29, 1943, after being overseas for 14 months.

Home On Leave

Lieutenant George C. A. Barbour, Jr., and his wife, the former Eleanor Shupe, of Merion Ave., Narberth, are on leave from the Army Air Field, Florence, S. C. Lieutenant Barbour is a resident of Germantown. Mrs. Barbour is a graduate of Lower Merion High School.

Society Seeks More Foster Homes Here

Children's Aid Group
Sends Out Letter
Telling of Need

The Children's Aid Society of Montgomery County provided a Merry Christmas for 204 children in the care of the agency, with gifts of toys, clothing and money distributed by staff visitors who played Santa Claus.

Mrs. John A. Lafore, of Penn Valley, a director of the Society and chairman of the publicity committee, has recently sent out the following letter to over 100 foster parents, asking that more people be informed of the need of foster homes for new children coming into the care of the Society:

"Dear Foster Parents: "Through the many years I have been on the Board of Directors of the Children's Aid Society of Montgomery County, I have watched with deep appreciation the wonderful work you have done with the children we have sent you—the poor, little unprepossessing children, unloved and undernourished, with their backgrounds of instability and insecurity. I have seen them grow into happy, healthy, normal children, under your loving care and guidance. Their problems have not been easy to solve, but in your home, with good standards and loving understanding, and with a feeling of peace and security about them, most of the problems have been solved.

"Now we come to you, asking for help along another line. We always need foster homes, but the need this year is greater than ever. The New York Children's Aid Society says in their appeal, 'It won't be regular old-fashioned Christmas for many families this year. Millions of our young men will celebrate it far away, leaving an aching gap in too many homes. But you can help to fill that gap, at least for the little children, by sharing your Christmas blessings.' Can you share your Christmas blessings by talking to your good neighbors about the great need for foster homes and the joy of helping little children? The best advertisement we have is the work you have done, and now, when the need is so great, you can help us by telling your neighbors and asking them to share their homes with some little child. 'Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these, ye have done it unto me.'"

His teammates are all former college and pro stars but Heindel, recently promoted to corporal, is easily holding his own.

In a recent game with Bainbridge Naval Air Base, one of the strongest service teams in the country, he scored eight points. He has tallied more than 40 in 11 contests. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Heindel, 38 Narbrook Park, Narberth.

Merchants Think Bryn Mawr Ration Board Is Highly Efficient, Says W. Hale

Vice-President Declares Some Want to See Them More Sympathetic; Deny They Have Asked OPA to Remove Members

In general, members of the Bryn Mawr Business Association are satisfied with the way the Bryn Mawr Rationing Board is conducting its business, C. Walton Hale, vice-president of the Association, declared this week.

Hale, who is community service member of both the Bryn Mawr and Wayne rationing boards, was answering stories published that the business group held a protest meeting and was seeking to have one or two members of the rationing board removed.

"Nothing could be further from the truth," Hale said. He pointed out that the subject came up at a recent meeting of the Association because a H. H. Perry, chairman of the rationing board, had sent out 150 letters asking citizens for criticism.

"Because these letters had been sent out," said Hale, "we placed this matter on our agenda."

Hale said that a good way to sum up what had transpired at this meeting would be to say: "It became apparent as the discussion progressed that little fault was found with the rationing board, but practically all criticisms hinged on the methods used in handling applicants for rationing."

To his knowledge, Hale said, none of the members of the business association had taken their complaints to the State OPA office or had asked for the removal of any rationing board members.

The Association, he explained, had six letters which were in reply to requests for criticism asked by Perry, but they were all highly complimentary. Only two out of the six letters implied that more sympathy should be extended to applicants for ration coupons.

Referring to a letter that had been drafted by E. E. Burlingame, president of the Lower Merion School Board, in behalf of the Association Hale said it sympathized with rationing board members for the public work they countered in administering rationing.

The letter, he said, did call attention to the lack of courtesy displayed by either members of the board or volunteer workers associated with the board. But, he said, the work of the board was highly praised.

Tin cans are still needed. These must be cleaned and flattened and put out on trash collection days in a separate container. They are then sent to the detinning plants. This is also official.

The above information is published in many inquiries. In spite of what anybody thinks or hears these statements are true. The need for paper, tin and other scrap is pressing. Follow the above directions and your contributions to the scrap pile will go to the purpose intended.

Urges Salvage of Old Papers, Records

Save Valuable Papers
From the Scrap
Drive Says Official

S. K. Stevens, executive secretary of the Pennsylvania Federation of Historical Societies, has notified officials of all historical societies that there is grave danger of valuable historical documents being destroyed in the current waste paper salvage drive.

"Our court houses are crowded," he says in a letter sent out this week, "and officials are apt to think that it is their patriotic duty to clean house. County records form the oldest and therefore most valuable records. Similar dangers are apparent in the tendency to clean out homes and throw out as waste paper family papers, letters, diaries and even old files of newspapers and magazines which may have great historical value. Any such document which is over 50 years old is very apt to have an historical importance."

"Under pressure of war conditions, some of the old county newspapers have been sold for publication or may do so in the future. Here is a treasure-trove for local history which must not be allowed to go into scrap. Their files should be preserved."

FACES COURT CHARGE UNLESS HE RAISES $1,200

Philip Ward, Vine St., Camden, N. J., sat for several hours this morning in the office of Sheriff R. Ronald Dettre endeavoring to raise $1,200 in order to save himself from going to the Montgomery County Prison in contempt of court.

Ward was brought before Judge Dannenhower this morning in chambers after he had been apprehended by Deputy Sheriff I. Norman Grubb in Philadelphia on an attachment for contempt for failure to comply with an order made by the court more than a year ago in connection with an equity action brought by Ward's brother, Clarence Ward, 46 of Black Rock Rd., Upper Providence Township.

Other guests were the State Regent-Elect, Mrs. Benjamin Williams, of Butler, Pa., and four regents: Mrs. David Noble Patterson, of Independence Hall Chapter, Philadelphia; Mrs. Chester Osborne, of the Lansdowne Chapter; Mrs. Archie Waugh, of the Germantown Chapter; and Mrs. William Groff, a past regent of the Merion Chapter.

There is urgent need for aid for Ellis Island at this time. Ten dollars was collected from the members at the meeting for this purpose. The Chapter also took in $45 for the Blood Plasma Fund.

Mrs. Harold C. Fenno played recordings of Christmas carols at the close of the meeting, and Mrs. Hugh G. Martin presided at the tea table.

In speaking of the tragedy, Lieutenant Green told of how he and several other men dived into the sea, joined hands in the water, forming a circle and were picked up in about an hour and a half. They were taken to Pearl Harbor, and later down to San Francisco.

Green is a graduate of Haverford Township High School and attended West Chester State Teachers College. He left there in his junior year to enlist in the Navy in June, 1941. After training at several camps he was commissioned last May at Corpus Christi, Tex. He was on his first mission with the Liscome Bay.

Home-Curing Will Help Use Supply of Pork

Washington, Dec. 29. — With your handout of five points to a person for pork, and with turkey left-overs on hand, you might gather up enough meat points to get a sizeable ham or shoulder to be cured in your refrigerator and kept till spring.

A new Department of Agriculture extension service circular, "Summary of Meat Curing Methods," will give you directions for the simple materials and methods. A mixture of two pounds of sugar, two pounds of salt and 12 ounces of saltpeter is more than enough to coat a ham. You can buy commercially prepared curing mixtures with a smoky flavor and follow the directions on the package. It is not essential that the cured ham be smoked.

The surplus of fresh pork is the predicament that brought on the emergency hand-out of points. However, they are valid for cured meats, too, and there are large supplies on hand.

RICE FLURRY
An order placing a ceiling on rice from the fields is waiting for clearance. Rice-growers at the end of November were getting 135 per cent of parity. This puts rice millers in a squeeze between high prices for unprocessed rice and ceilings on milled rice. They are reported to be closing up shop in great numbers. However, rice growers do not want to take any lower prices. So in the end you may see retail prices increased if no other adjustment can be made.

CUT COMING UP
Expect more cuts in paper gadgetry for households before long. Some of the luxuries that are left will have to go, and you will have to use such items as paper towels more thrifly. The stocks of Christmas paper and greeting cards which seem to contradict talk of a paper shortage are being ordered before the paper limitation orders went through. The War Production Board wants every newspaper, magazine and grocery bag put into salvage. However they must be turned in separately, because the manpower to sort them is not available.

STOVES WITH SEA-LEGS
A compact coal-burning stove of a type originally made for yachts has been tried and found good at the Bureau of Standards, where it is known as "Port-hole Pete." The stove may be considered for war housing projects. However, experts at the War Housing Administration are dubious about the small oven and the appearance of space limitation in contrast to the fancy facades the American housewife usually sees. Yacht-stoves usually have stove tops made of heavy-duty materials, but they can be made cheaply of light sheet metal.

High Notes

The students and faculty wish to congratulate Mr. Raymond for the fine performance presented by the combined musical organizations at the annual Christmas program in spite of the absence of Dr. Bruce C. Beach, orchestra director. The program, which was held in the High School Auditorium on December 15, was the first such program of the year featuring the choir and orchestra in a combined performance. Highlights of the program were: a soprano solo by Marie Lessig, a soprano solo by Mary Alice Perkins, a bass solo by Hugh Kistler, and a tenor solo by Fred Newcome. During the latter portion of the program Georgianna Veit sang the soprano solo part in "The Infant Jesus" and Nada Strain the same part in the song, "Sleep, My Jesus, Sleep." The program closed with the audience singing the Christmas carol, "Silent Night," accompanied by all the various music departments.

Lower Merion played host to a group of children from the Christ Home in Philadelphia on January 17. These bright-eyed youngsters were first entertained in the home rooms where they were kept occupied by gifts purchased by the students in the respective home rooms. Next to the gym to meet Santa Claus, alias Bill "Hoarse" Barker, who pried into their lives to learn if they had been good and thus deserved a gift from old Saint Nick. Of course the kiddies gave the "right" answer and in return they were presented with another gift. Other than the gifts received in the home rooms and from Santa, the little tots were presented with a doll—the girls I mean—which was made by Miss Clare Filler, instructor of Latin, and her sister in their spare time; also a hand-knitted scarf was given to each child. This project was also sponsored by Miss Filler who was in charge of the girls of the school who volunteered their services. After an hour with Santa, the children from the Home, laden with presents, made a bee-line to the small cafeteria where refreshments were served.

Later they were entertained in the school auditorium where they joined in the singing of Christmas carols.

The two representatives from each home room who had charge of one child for the afternoon, prepared the kiddies for their trip back to the home.

High Notes

The students and faculty wish to congratulate Mr. Raymond for the fine performance presented by the combined musical organizations at the annual Christmas program in spite of the absence of Dr. Bruce C. Beach, orchestra director. The program, which was held in the High School Auditorium on December 15, was the first such program of the year featuring the choir and orchestra in a combined performance. Highlights of the program were: a soprano solo by Marie Lessig, a soprano solo by Mary Alice Perkins, a bass solo by Hugh Kistler, and a tenor solo by Fred Newcome. During the latter portion of the program Georgianna Veit sang the soprano solo part in "The Infant Jesus" and Nada Strain the same part in the song, "Sleep, My Jesus, Sleep." The program closed with the audience singing the Christmas carol, "Silent Night," accompanied by all the various music departments.

Lower Merion played host to a group of children from the Christ Home in Philadelphia on January 17. These bright-eyed youngsters were first entertained in the home rooms where they were kept occupied by gifts purchased by the students in the respective home rooms. Next to the gym to meet Santa Claus, alias Bill "Hoarse" Barker, who pried into their lives to learn if they had been good and thus deserved a gift from old Saint Nick. Of course the kiddies gave the "right" answer and in return they were presented with another gift. Other than the gifts received in the home rooms and from Santa, the little tots were presented with a doll—the girls I mean—which was made by Miss Clare Filler, instructor of Latin, and her sister in their spare time; also a hand-knitted scarf was given to each child. Sister Knows Best

By Edith Addison Thomas

Gerry had been so busy making arrangements for his furlough, his wedding and his honeymoon that he had not had time to think of his sister Anne. But now, as he faced the station platform waiting for her train, he was worried. Left orphans when he was six and she fifteen, Anne had practically brought him up. Their congenial tastes made them exceptionally close—except, he reflected ruefully, where girls were concerned. There they had never seen eye to eye. The girls that attracted Gerry were either too loud or too vain to please Anne. And those she picked out for him left him cold.

But this was the real thing! He was being married, and Anne would have to like it. But when had Anne ever liked a thing she hadn't arranged herself? He looked up the track for the tenth time.

Well—there was the major's advice when you were in a jam. Strategy—fool 'em! He was continually dinnin' it into his young officers' ears. Strategy—a plan of action. This would take some maneuvering.

He looked up the track for the tenth time. The train was coming in and soon Anne, severe in tailored suit, descended. As he met her eyes over the intervening heads, he noted with a touch of annoyance that managing, sister-knows-best—that's good—for you look. "Come, Anne," he said above her sedate embrace. "Phronsie's invited you to stay with her. You'll love being there."

"Oh, no, Gerry. I can't do that. I must go to a hotel."

"But she expects you, Anne." "I'm sorry, Gerry, but you must realize how the suddenness of all this has upset me. Your telegram—and a girl I've never even heard of! I must get used to her by degrees. I must feel free, Gerry."

Free for what? It sounded ominous. Gerry thought as he carried her bags across the square. But it would give him a chance to call Phronsie. She'd do her best for all of them.

It was evening when he escorted his sister down the streets shaded by moss-draped trees. Phronsie stood on the veranda to welcome them. She made a delightful picture, managing to strike just the right note between modernity and the old South. In her soft drawl she introduced her father and her cousin Millicent, who, with her straight black hair and laughing eyes, was a perfect foil to Phronsie's fairness. She had a cameo loveliness of her own.

Gerry was proud to introduce his sister into this Southern home over which Phronsie presided with so much grace. It was not until they were seated at the candle-shaded dinner table that Anne brought up the subject of the wedding. "You must tell me your plans, Phronsie," she said. "You know I want to help."

"Oh, Millicent and I have made elaborate arrangements," Phronsie told her. "It's to be Saturday, you know—in the garden." "In the garden? Oh, I don't believe in outdoor weddings. It might rain, you know, and then—" she raised her hands in a gesture of dismay.

"Oh, we're all set and it simply mustn't rain—it can't rain, can it, Millicent?" Phronsie spoke vehemently.

"We're hoping it won't," Millicent replied with her quiet smile. Anne remained disapproving and after dinner turned her attention to Millicent. Soon they discovered a mutual reading taste and were chatting happily together until Gerry interrupted. "I want you to hear Phronsie sing, Anne. She has a voice. We expect great things of her."

"Indeed?" But Anne listened attentively, her eyes riveted on the young couple while Gerry accompanied Phronsie in some of the old plantation songs.

"I hope to study in New York some day," Phronsie volunteered when she stopped.

"Indeed?" the eyebrows went up again. "And can you combine that with a domestic career?"

"Oh, I don't know," Phronsie answered. "I suppose every girl hopes to marry some time."

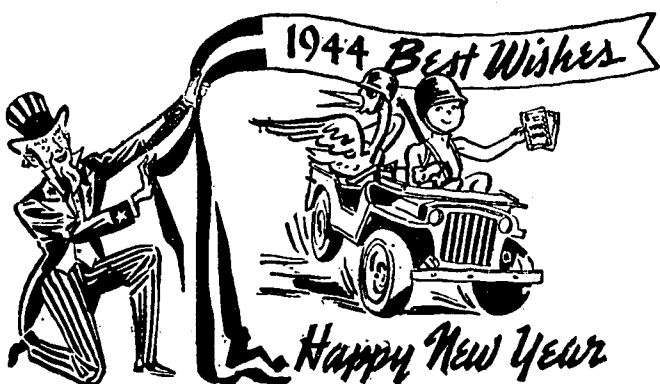

Anne let that pass, but Gerry saw her give an almost imperceptible shake of the head. On their return to the hotel, he squeezed her elbow hard and asked, "Well, Anne? Out with it. What do you think of her?"

His sister drew a deep breath.

TWO GIRLS + THREE SOLDIERS = ONE DATE

"Oh tell us, pretty maidens, would you care to share our company?" three of Uncle Sam's nephews ask lovely Donna Reed and petite Dorothy Morris.

"They're just lonely not crazy" the girls decide and allow the boys to accompany them to the movies.

"We like going to the movies with girls, it smells so much nicer than camp."

The picture is over, the rain has stopped, what next?

One of the most tender and charming scenes of William Saroyan's "The Human Comedy" deals with the meeting of the three lonesome soldiers with Donna Reed and Dorothy Morris. All they ask is the girls' company for the evening; and the girls agree to let the boys accompany them to the movies. Their "Victory Date" is a simple declaration of American faith and confidence in our War Effort.

"Dear Mom..." wire the boys to the folks back home.

"Thank you for a lovely evening—good luck, soldier!"

Eagles Beaten In Opener of Yule Tourney

Norristown High made its 1943-44 basketball debut last night and went down to a 33-21 defeat at the hands of Radnor High School's quintet in a hard fought tussle on the Wayne floor. The charges of Art Herr are competing in the second annual basketball tournament held in the Radnor High School gymnasium, sponsored by the Rotary Club of Wayne.

The green but scrappy Norristown five got off to a poor start as Radnor employed a fast-breaking attack to build up an 11-2 margin during the first quarter. Led by Bud Clarke, the Radnor team scored four times before Happy Davis, Norristown center, chalked up the first Eagle field goal.

As the second period got under way the Norristown squad whittled at the 9-point deficit and outscored the home team to trail by only two points at the half-time 15-13. Howard Hurst, one of the holdovers from last year's junior varsity, netted two twin-pointers and three foul goals during the second quarter to lead the Eagle rally.

Radnor regained their comfortable margin in the final half with a surge in its offensive.

Hurst topped the Eagle scoring with a total of nine points while Clarke led the victors with 10 markers.

In the opening game of the evening Haverford High, future foe of the Blue and White in the Section One campaign, humiliated Berwyn High's passers, 36-8. After getting off to a slow start, the Fords assembled a 14-2 lead at the end of the second quarter.

Taking advantage of their superior height, Haverford moved away from the Berwyn five with a half dozen goals in the third quarter. Jack Roy led the winners with 12 points.

Tomorrow night Haverford and Radnor, the two winners, will hook up in the deciding game of the tourney while Norristown's quintet will clash with Berwyn in the opener. Haverford holds an advantage over the home team, having already beaten Radnor.

Prizes will be awarded by the Rotarians to all four teams participating in the tournament, with several trophies among the awards. Norristown will open its official campaign next Tuesday when Bridgetown clashes with the Eagles on the North End court.

'Skull Practice' Makes Perfect Hat Wardrobe for Day and Night

At left is the head-hugging basic skull cap of felt, over which are worn the various "slip-covers" which provide a millinery wardrobe. Worn with or without a veil, as shown, the skull cap itself is suitable for daytime wear. At right, malleine veiling edged with silver blue lame braid transforms it into a dressy topper for evening.

(From Saks Fifth Avenue, New York)

One of the season's cleverest millinery novelties is the "slip-cover" hat shown above, brain child of designer Joseph. The basic item is a snug little skull cap, of sections of felt joined by soutache braid which can be worn alone, or dressed up with a variety of "slip-covers," chosen to suit any mood or occasion. The covers are designed to fit exactly over the skull cap.

Motorists Must Notify Motor Vehicle Bureau Of Address Changes

Now is the time for motorists to send notice of change of address to the Pennsylvania Bureau of Motor Vehicles. Operators' licenses expire January 31, 1944, the Keystone Automobile Club advises. Motorists who have moved within the year will not receive applications unless they inform the Bureau of their present address.

In co-operation with the Department of Revenue, the Club urges operators who have changed their addresses to give immediate notice to the Bureau on forms which may be obtained at any Keystone Automobile Club office or from aldermen, justices of the peace, automobile dealers or direct from the Bureau of Motor Vehicles.

British Surgeon Tells of Wonders Performed by Use of Blood Plasma

Carlisle Barracks, Pa., Dec. 29 (INS)—Proof that the nation's millions of blood donors are saving countless lives on the far-flung battlefields of World War II was given today by Maj. Gen. William Heneage Ogilvie, consulting surgeon of the British Middle Eastern forces.

In a recent address before doctors training at Carlisle Barracks, the army's "medical West Point," he declared that "there is no such thing as a dead soldier until the burial service."

"Blood plasma is a miracle of modern science which has saved many a life in this war," he asserted.

Good Chance to Recover
Wounded soldiers have a "better chance" of recovery than their forefathers, he said. "The picture is entirely different now than it was in the last war; blood banks and plasma, modern surgery, better trained men and more sanitary

Studio Colombo's Discover Britton

Hollywood.—It's a little difficult to reconcile the screen's chronic laments about the shortage of real talent with the story of Barbara Britton.

Two years ago a fresh and smiling young blonde appeared at this desk with a tiny white box tagged "A Bundle from Britton," and even with a studio press agent hovering in the background I could believe her assertion that the contents "gingerbread" had been cooed by her own lily-white hands. This assertion, from one justly skeptical about the cooking claims of most movie actresses, is made merely to emphasize that Miss Britton possessed that invaluable asset to an actress, convincing sincerity.

After this stunt, the fresh young blonde disappeared into the semi-obscure of the Paramount stock company. She had a bit, a mere flash, in "Wake Island" and bits in "Reap the Wild Wind," "The Louisiana Purchase," and "So Proudly We Hail."

The other day she had orders to report to Wardrobe. There she was fitted in the robe and veil of a convent novice, then taken to a test stage. . . . Today she has the leading role opposite Ray Milland in "Tomorrow's Harvest," a film of some importance if for no other reason that the fact that Frank Borzage is directing it.

So Miss Britton, who was discovered because she was queen of the Long Beach (Calif.) float in the 1940 Tournament of Roses, has been discovered anew. Both her beauty, which in convent garb has the necessary ethereal quality, and her acting are eliciting studio enthusiasm. She is a find. But—

It's not Paramount's fault that Barbara Britton is getting her big chance. Paramount wanted Maureen O'Hara for the role, and Miss O'Hara would have played it except that, on doctor's orders because of approaching motherhood, she has retired temporarily. In the hurried search for a replacement, Borzage remembered a girl he had once sought for another picture of his, and that's why Barbara Britton was summoned to Wardrobe, to the test stage, and to opportunity.

Every studio, among its stock girls, has ambitious and talented youngsters like Barbara Britton—kept from opportunity because they lack a name, kept from a name because they lack opportunity.

There are many, of course, whose talents are mediocre, if not absent, which could explain why producers and directors, surveying the list, generally turn to a newcomer from Broadway or the newest cutie under contract, who at least hasn't been around before.
